Paper on a bedroom door within an apartment is not a violation to the National Fire Code of Canada

Hello Michael,

Thank you for your speedy response. The door in question is my bedroom door inside the apartment, connected only to the living room area, not to any corridor.

Attention Drew McPherson

The recognized codes for New Brunswick are the National Building Code and National Fire Code of Canada.

Dwellings in an apartment setting where the apartment door opens into a common corridor are fire rated doors and it is not permitted to have any combustible material on these doors.

Mike

ATTENTION! External email / courriel externe.

Dear Fire Marshall,

I am enquiring regarding fire codes for "sleeping accommodations" according to the Fire Prevention Act. Is there a publication which provides detailed information regarding the applicable fire codes for such dwellings? I ask because I am hoping to demonstrate that a recent demand that I not place an 8.5"x11" paper sign on a door "because it is against the fire code" is a clearly fictitious allegation used as an excuse to behave adversely towards me (because I'm neurodiverse and encounter a lot of diversiphobic discrimination, but that's besides the point).

Thank you kindly,

Drew McPherson
